No. 1.—THE WHITECHAPEL MURDERS.

The first of the so-called Whitechapel murders took place at Christmas, when an unknown woman was found murdered near Osborne-street, Whitechapel. How she came by her death no one could say, but a certain grim horror distinguished it from ordinary murders by the fact that an iron stake was thrust into her person. It is necessary to mention this, because she is confused with death was not cause the worst kind.

No. 2.—OUTRAGED TO DEATH BY A GANG.

On Easter Tuesday, Emma Smith, "unfortunate," was passing Whitechapel Church at half-past one in the morning, when she was accosted by some men who seized her money and then outraged her in succession. She was picked up dying, but lived long enough to tell her story. The gang seem to have been animated by plunder and passion. They stayed long enough to kill the woman by every imaginable atrocity, but no one of them has been identified. The incident attracted little attention and no arrests were made.

No. 3.—STABBED, WITH THIRTY-NINE WOUNDS.

Early on the morning of August 7 a woman, supposed to be Martha Turner, aged thirty-five, a hawker, lately living off Commercial-road, E, was discovered lying dead on the first-floor landing of some model dwellings known as George-yard-buildings, Commercial-street, Spital-fields. The woman when found presented a shocking appearance, her body being covered with stab wounds to the number of thirty-nine, some of which had been done with a bayonet. How the body came to be there is a mystery which the police as yet have not solved. It is a singular coincidence that the murder was committed during Bank Holiday night, and is almost identical with another murder which was perpetrated near the same spot on the night of the previous Bank Holiday. The police, said the coroner, would endeavour to bring home the crime to the guilty party. No one was arrested for this crime and it also passed almost unnoticed.

No. 4.—THE FIRST DISEMBOWELLED.

Early in the morning of September 1 Mary Ann Nichols was murdered under circumstances of a most revolting character in Buck's-row, Whitechapel-road. The body was found lying on the footpath, against the gates of the yard. Police-constable Neil was walking along Buck's-row between four and half-past in the morning, when he noticed the body on the footpath, and a very brief examination revealed the fact of her murder. Her throat was cut from ear to ear, and her body had been ripped up from the abdomen almost to the breast bone, while a second cut gashed the left thigh. The coroner, on September 23, 1888, said that she was last seen endeavouring to walk eastward down Whitechapel. She said she had had her lodging money three times that day, but that she had spent it; that she was without money; that the lodging-house deputy refused to trust her; that she was going to look about and get some money to pay her lodgings; and that she should soon be back. What her exact movements were after this it is impossible to say. At all events, in less than an hour and a quarter after this she is found dead at a spot rather under three-quarters of a mile distant. The time at which the body was found cannot have been far from 3-4.5 A.M., as it is fixed by so many independent data. The condition in which the body was found appears to prove conclusively that the deceased was killed on the exact spot on which she was found. There is not a trace of blood anywhere, except at the spot where her neck was lying.

No. 5.—THE FIRST WITH A MISSING PORTION.

On September 9, at five minutes to six o'clock on Saturday morning, a man named John Davis, living at 29, Hanbury-street, Spitalfields, discovered the body of Annie Chapman in the yard at the rear of that

THE WHITECHAPEL MURDERS.

EIGHT IN TWELVE MONTHS AND MORE TO FOLLOW.

We publish the following complete list up to date of the murders which have been committed in the last twelve months in a comparatively narrow area in the East-end. The first two do not appear to have been committed by the same hand as the last six. The murderers are all still at large:—

No. 1.—IMPALED WITH AN IRON STAKE.

The first of the so-called Whitechapel murders took place Christmas, when an unknown woman was found murdered near Osborn street, Whitechapel. How she came by her death no one could say, but a certain grim horror distinguished it from ordinary murders by the fact that an iron stake was thrust into her person. It is necessary to mention this, because in the lists that appear in the morning papers she is confused with the victim of Easter Tuesday, Emma Smith, whose death was not caused by the same hand as the last six.

No. 2.—OUTRAGED TO DEATH BY A GANG.

The screenshot shows the Gale Primary Sources interface for British Library Newspapers. At the top left is the Gale logo. The main header area features a historical illustration of a street scene with a newspaper vendor in the foreground. Below the illustration is a search bar with the text "Search..." and a magnifying glass icon. A yellow box highlights the "Advanced Search" button. A navigation bar at the bottom of the header contains icons for "Browse", "About", "Learning Center", "Search History", and "Get Link".

ABOUT THIS RESOURCE

Sourced from the extensive holdings of the British Library, British Library Newspapers delivers a wide range of irreplaceable local and regional voices to reflect the social, political, and cultural events of the eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth centuries. These newspapers, emerging during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries as a crucial channel of information in towns and major cities, provide researchers with a unique, first-hand perspective on history. With more than 240 newspaper titles, the series is comprised of approximately 6.4 million pages of historic content, from articles to advertisements. This collection illuminates diverse and distinct regional attitudes, cultures,...
